

Spring was coming and all of the animals in the woods were giving birth to babies.

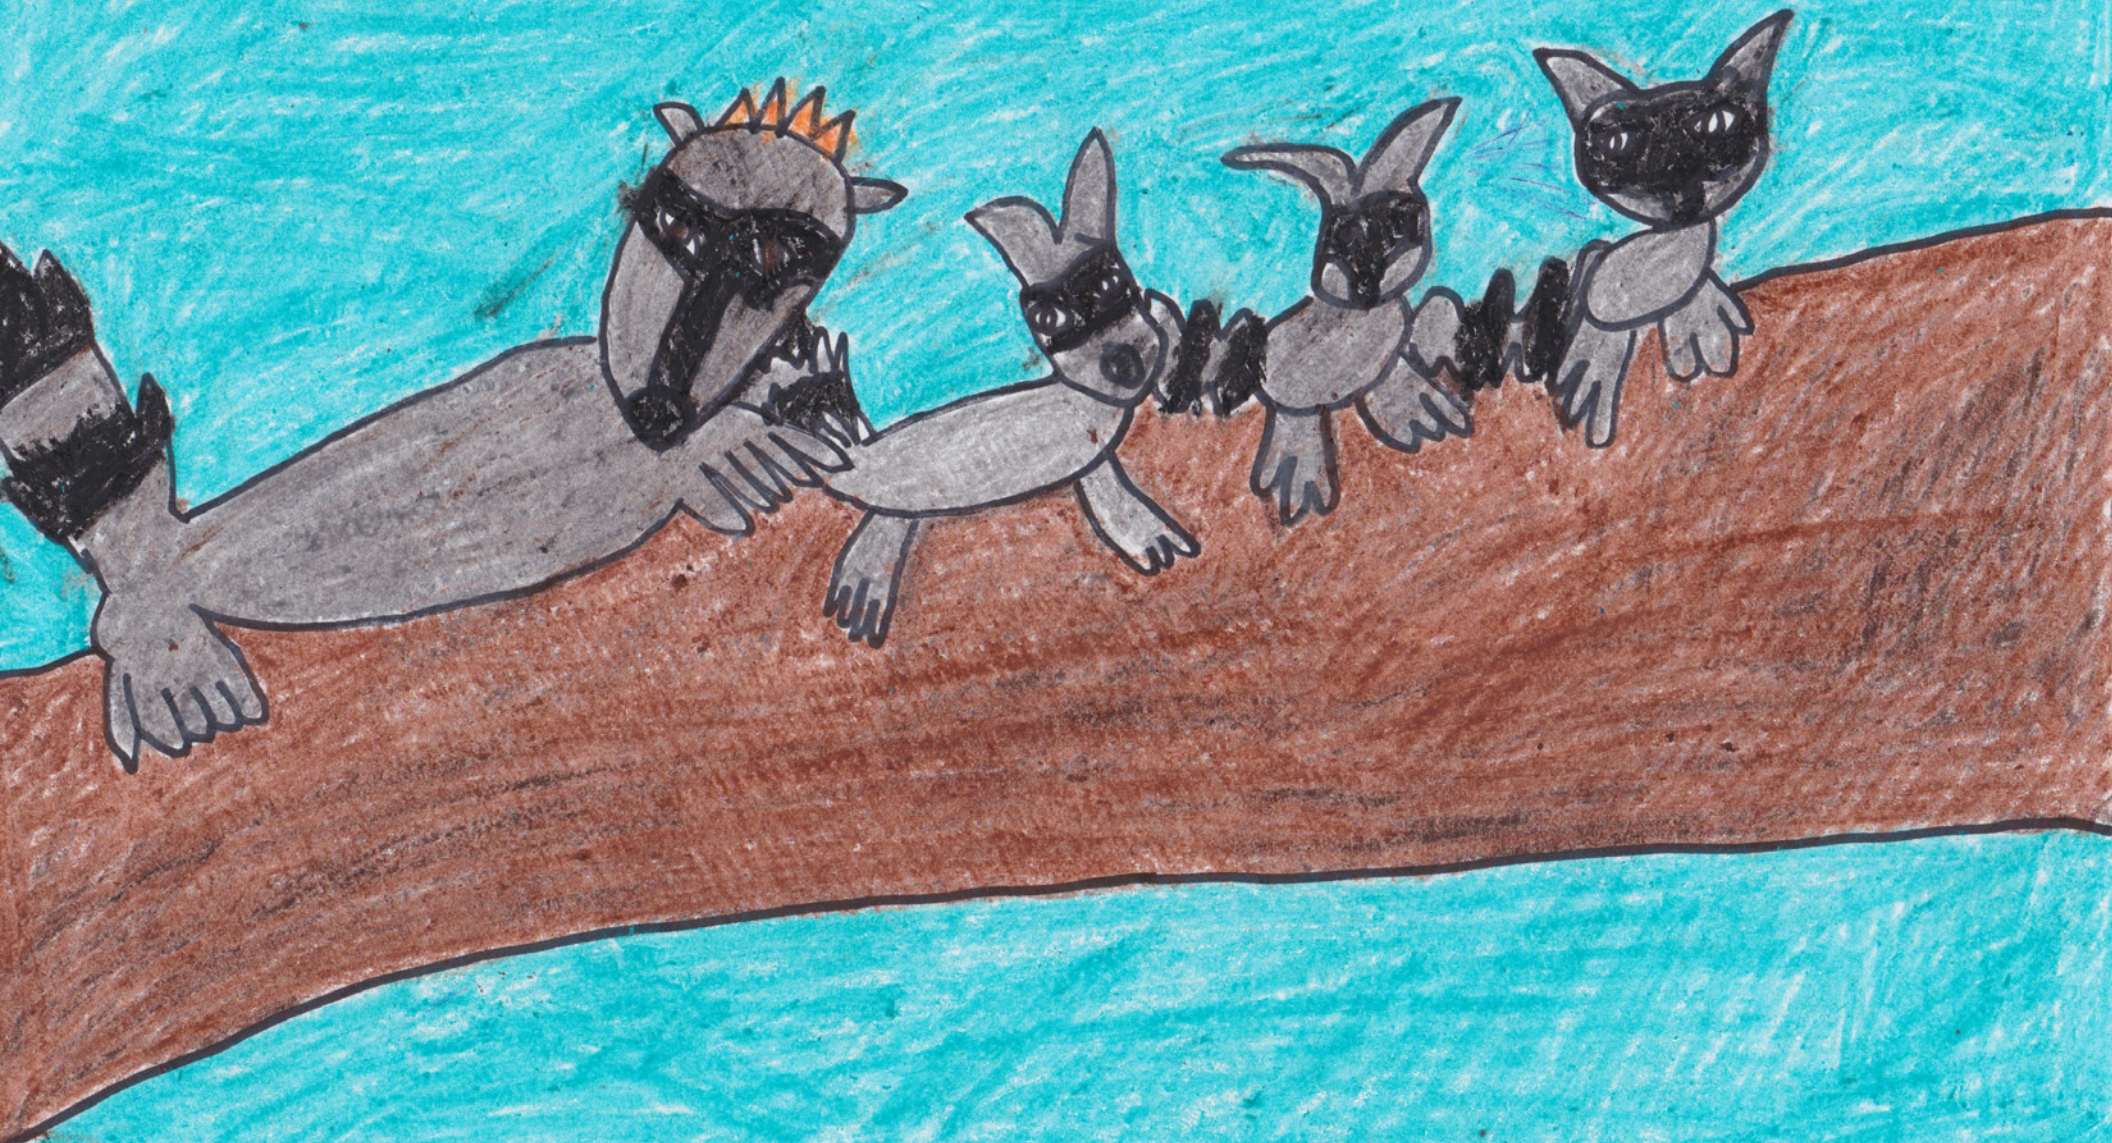

On a Monday morning an ancient bear gave birth to a cub. The bear was the first to have her baby and she was the Queen of all Nature.

On Tuesday night a beautiful mother eagle saw her two eggs hatch into frizzy grey birdies. The eagle was the Queen of the Skies.

On Wednesday afternoon a mother racoon with a pitch black mask gave birth to three babies with striped tails. She was the Queen of the Night.

On Thursday
after breakfast a
scaly mother
lizard watched
her four eggs
hatch into chameleons.
She was the Queen of Colors.

On Friday evening a skunk with a secret scent gave birth to five cuddly babies. She was the Queen of Protection.

On Saturday late in the night a wise owl
welcomed her six
fuzzy hatchlings.
She was the Queen of Wisdom.

On Sunday morning a long eared rabbit birthed her seven small ones. She was the last mother to have her babies and she was the Queen of the Earth.

The forest was full of life.
